

The Title

An Author

This is some text before a section. It shouldn't be indented. Each section should start on a new page (but subsections shouldn't).

This is a section

This is some test text. This is formatted in italics and bold, with - various – dashes—, and trailing dots...

‘These quotes should be curly,’ and “so should these.” There should be a blank line before the next paragraph:

And then there should be some text <sup>in superscript</sup> and <sub>in subscript</sub>, and a footnote* with a star, a footnote† with a dagger, and this should be monospace.

Subsection

Test text test text test text.

This is a quote block. It should be indented slightly and shouldn’t contain a line break.

This is a quoted line block. It should be indented slightly and have a line break after ‘slightly’, and formatting.

“These literal double curly quotes, used where smart quotes gets it wrong, curl the right way even though they’re on different lines.”

‘These literal single curly quotes, used where smart quotes gets it wrong, curl the right way even though they’re on different lines.’

After this line there should be stars.

* * *

This is a new paragraph after the stars. This text is SMALL CAPS. Here is a pound sign (£), a euro sign (€), and three letters with accents: ëóû.

---

*This is a footnote. It should appear at the bottom of the page.

†Another footnote.

This is a second section

foo

There is an image here.

And this is even more italic text.